- Are you ready to live like a college student? Traditional wisdom advises you to “live like a college student now, so you don't have to later.” There are some simple steps you can take now to help ease future financial burdens.
  - o Keep track of everything running through your student account, so small purchases don't unexpectedly add up and leave you with less money in your account than you were counting on.
  - o Be smart with credit cards. Understand that any time you use a credit card, you are borrowing money. If you don't pay off your balance each month, interest will be added to the total amount you owe. (Do you really feel like paying interest on a pizza you ate three months ago?)

High School Seniors

- Meet with your counselor early in the year to verify that everything is in order for you to graduate with what you need to meet college admission requirements. Inquire about classes you can take for college credit and research taking Advanced Placement or College-Level Examination Program exams.

- Don't quit extracurricular activities like sports, drama, or newspaper. Seniors usually take over leadership roles in activities like these, and continued involvement just might provide you with valuable experience and leadership skills that will serve you in college.

- Make note of registration deadlines and prepare for upcoming ACT and SAT exams. Taking the exam now may help you during the college decision process. You may also want to check with your high school counselor to see if there is still time to take the PSAT. Taken during the junior year, the PSAT is used to award scholarships by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation and the National Hispanic Recognition Program.

- Now is a great time to prepare for your future. Consider pursuing extracurricular activities, such as sports, performing arts, or volunteer work, and start thinking about different career possibilities. Talk to your guidance counselor or teachers for help as you explore a variety of occupations.

Middle School Students

- Start the year off right by laying the ground work that will get you through middle school, high school, and eventually college. Pay attention in class, be ready when test time rolls around, and remember what you're working for:

- o College graduates have more choices than those without a college education.
- o Continuing your education after high school increases your chances to make more money.
- o College graduates usually enjoy a better quality of life, higher savings and more consumer power.

Parents

- Encourage your child to take college classes, if they are available at your local high school. Courses are usually offered at a reduced rate to high school students and can help your son or daughter earn a few credits toward a college degree.
- If your child is preparing for his or her senior year of high school, don't overlook all the mail from various colleges. Encourage them to look through the materials to evaluate which schools are best suited for their future plans. In addition, the MDHE's Institution, Program, and Degree Search allows you to search for Missouri schools based on school type, type of degree, type of program and location. Information about tuition and fees can also be found on the MDHE's website.
