

WE'RE HIRING SUPERHEROES

TO DEVELOP THE WORKFORCE OF THE FUTURE

WHO WE ARE

The Missouri Department of Higher Education is launching a transformation to become the nation's leader in preparing the workforce of the future. The department is combining with the state's divisions of workforce development and economic research to redefine Missouri's approach to postsecondary opportunities and increase the range of options available to citizens after they graduate from high school.

WHAT WE WANT

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER FOR PERFORMANCE & STRATEGY

This is a new position. The person who takes this job must be a dynamic visionary who can develop a best-in-class data-driven performance and strategy team, serve as a member of the new department's executive leadership team, and define the new Office of Postsecondary Performance & Strategy.

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER FOR POSTSECONDARY POLICY

This is also a new position. The person who takes this job will work with a team at the department as well as with partners around the state to drive policy initiatives that increase the percent of working-age adults who have a high-quality degree or certificate. This person will also serve as a member of the new department's executive leadership team and define the new Office of Postsecondary Policy.

Both leaders must be creative, dedicated, thorough, magnetic, and relentless. They will identify the resources needed to achieve the new department's vision and work closely with the commissioner of higher education to ensure success.

WHY TO APPLY

This is an opportunity to be part of the executive leadership team that breaks the mold, founds a new department, and approaches postsecondary education and training in a new way.

The person who takes this job will join a team that has the highest levels of self-reported motivation and accountability in Missouri state government and that is headquartered in Jefferson City, which has topped Rand McNally's list of most beautiful small towns in America.
